We are still heartily of the opinion that decent libation supports as many million lives as it threatens; donates pleasure and sparkle to more lives than it shadows; inspires more brilliance in the world of art, music, letters, and common ordinary intelligent conversation, than it dims.

SCOTCH WHISKY

Scotch whisky is more than a drink; it's a cultural emblem and the national drink of Scotland. It carries the weight of a history dating back over 500 years.

The earliest records of whisky production in Scotland date back to the late 15th century, and since then, it has evolved while retaining its deep-rooted heritage.

The creation of Scotch whisky is governed by strict regulations that contribute to its exceptional quality. By law, Scotch whisky must be made from water, barley, and/or other grains, and yeast. No additional flavours can be added after distillation, except for caramel colouring to regulate colour.

The purest, freshest water is necessary to uphold the name Scotch has been handed down over the years, as does the crop of barley or other grain sourced.

Islay whiskies are the most distinctive and complex, defined by intense peat and coastal notes of sea air, iodine, and seaweed. Across the west coast from Arran to Orkney, harsh maritime conditions shape robust, warming drams made for rugged landscapes.

CAMPBELTOWN

Campbeltown whiskies are known for a distinct combination of sweet, fruity, smoky, and salty notes, often with a rich, oily texture and a characteristic “industrial funk” that includes earthy or mineral undertones. Their coastal location imparts a subtle maritime or briny quality to the flavour, while the presence of peat offers a balanced smoke. These unique characteristics stem from Campbeltown’s history as a former whisky capital, with only a few distilleries now producing these enduringly distinctive single malts.

These are epitomised by those from its famous sub region known as Speyside, which has the highest concentration of malt distilleries; over half of those throughout Scotland in fact. Because they cover such a wide region, the styles vary greatly, but quite often they tend to be light to medium bodied, showing grassy and floral notes, dried fruit and heather honey, backed up by tones of orchard fruits and spice.

A Speyside whisky is one that has been produced in the area known as Speyside, Scotland. A Speyside whisky is also classed as a subdivision of the Highland region, so the true regional taste is open for debate. For a whisky to be classed as a Speyside, it needs to be created near the river Spey. As a rule of thumb, if distilleries source their water from the Spey or any springs or streams that feed into this river, their tippie can be classed as a Speyside whisky.

IRISH WHISKEY

30ML

From just across the water comes a completely different dram all together:

The Irish Pure Pot Still. Made in just a handful of distilleries these days, the Irish were responsible for one of the liquor industry's greatest breakthroughs: Continuous Distillation. This meant that a spirit could be produced faster, in higher volumes and with greater purity than its counterparts to the east. The result is a lighter, malty, smooth and at times honeyed spirit.

AMERICAN WHISKEY

American whiskey is a diverse category of whiskey made in the United States from a fermented mash of grains, such as corn, rye, or wheat, and aged in new, charred oak barrels. It is known for a variety of flavor profiles, including sweet notes of vanilla and caramel, or spicier notes from rye. Key types include Bourbon (at least 51% corn), Tennessee Whiskey (bourbon filtered through maple charcoal), and Rye Whiskey (at least 51% rye).

Congressional proclamation issued in 1964 declared Bourbon an ‘All American product’, whereby strict laws governing its production came into force. 51% percent of the grain used in making the whiskey must be corn; must be aged for a minimum of two years in new charred oak barrels and nothing can be added at bottling except spring water, must be produced only in Kentucky.

KENTUCKY STRAIGHT RYE WHISKEY 30ML

In the United States, “rye whiskey” is, by law, made from a mash of at least 51% rye. (The other ingredients of the mash are usually corn and malted barley.)

Rye whiskey was the prevalent whiskey of the North-Eastern States, especially Pennsylvania and Maryland, but largely disappeared after Prohibition.

CANADIAN WHISKY

3 OML

Canadian distillers make predominantly rye based whiskies also. The distillers can also age their whiskies in sherry or assorted fruit wine casks to bolster their particular flavour profile. The resultant spirit is smooth with a lighter body than the spicy, complex straight American rye style.

Australian distillers are making quite an impression on the global stage, producing spirit to rival some of the world's finest producers. None more so than whisky makers from places like Sullivans Cove, Belgrove, Lark, Overeem, and Nant.

Japanese whisky is a spirit produced and bottled in Japan, made from malted grains (such as barley), aged in wooden casks in Japan for a minimum of three years, and using water sourced from Japan. The entire process of saccharification, fermentation, and distillation must occur at a distillery in Japan. Stare into the familiar reflection of the polished copper pots in Japan and you may witness the Speyside influence that manifests itself in this new world generation of whisky. Comparably to Scotch, Japanese Whisky requires the double distillation of malted barley in copper pot stills, with grain whisky produced in column stills for both single malts and blended whisky.

RUM/RON/RHUM

Even though the Caribbean is undoubtedly the spiritual and cultural home of rum, the category has no appellation and can therefore be made anywhere that sugar cane is grown. Molasses— the fermentable by-product of sugar production, is believed to have first been discovered by the slaves who worked the cane fields of the Caribbean soon after Columbus brought the first cuttings of the grass to Hispaniola, present day Haiti, in the late 15th century.

RUM STYLES

30ML

The profile of a typical Barbadian rum might include a sweet, fruity note with undercurrents of spices and a smooth, warm finish a versatility that makes these rums excellent for both sipping neat and for use in cocktails. In Barbados, rum is more than just a product; it's a way of life.

RON STYLES

30ML

Spanish Rum, or Ron, refers to a style of molasses-based rum characterized by a light-bodied, smooth, and often subtly sweet profile, traditionally produced in former Spanish colonies (Cuba, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Venezuela) or in Spain itself. They are typically column-distilled and aged using the Solera system, resulting in approachable, blended spirits.

RHUM STYLES

3 OML

French-style rum, known as Rhum Agricole, is defined by its use of fresh sugarcane juice instead of molasses, giving it a grassy, earthy, and more complex flavor profile compared to other rum styles. Originating from French-speaking Caribbean islands like Martinique and Guadeloupe, it is often produced using column stills, similar to those used for Cognac, and can be aged in French oak barrels.

RUM JAMAICAN STYLES

3 OML

The style is known to be heavier, because there are more pot stills in Jamaica than any other Caribbean Island. Pot-still rums tend to be heavy and robust with big-flavours and plenty of Caribbean 'funk', distinguishing them from rums typically found in Spanish-speaking islands.

TEQUILA

Tequila is made from the distilled juice of the blue agave. The heart of the plant, known as the piña, is the main source of the fermentable sugars necessary to make tequila. Tequila is categorised by the level of agave it contains and the amount of time it is aged, whereby 100% Blue Agave is regarded as the finest.

The Los Altos region of Jalisco is typified by its red soil. This soil isn't known for being as fertile for other crops, but it does wonders for the Agave tequila. Consequently, the best agave comes from this area.

The area surrounding the town of Tequila features fertile dark brown earth. The tequila produced from distilleries that source Agave from this area tends to be earthy, vegetal and herbaceous when bottled young.

MEZCAL / RAICILLA

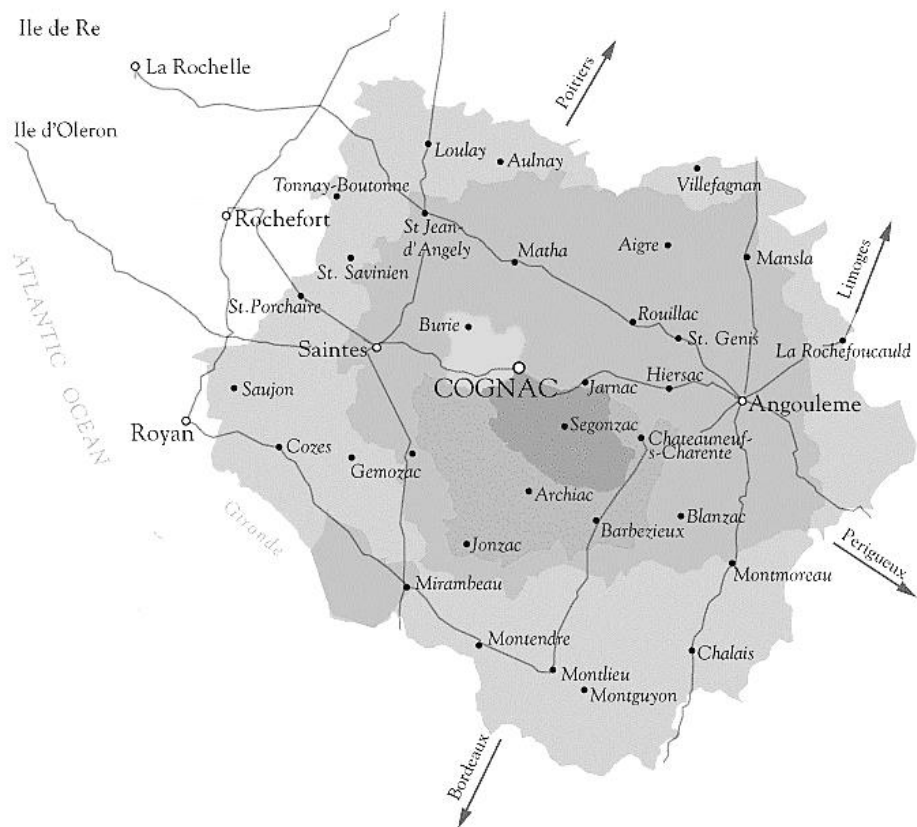

3 OML

Mezcal is also protected by an Appellation of Origin status (granted in 1995).

It is produced in many regions of Mexico, most notably Oaxaca. Mezcal typically exhibit earthier, smokey profiles and develop richer agave flavour.

COGNAC

Cognac is the most famous and revered of all the world's brandies, produced under very strict guidelines in only six designated sub regions within the area of Cognac. The best ones hail from a small area in the centre of Cognac, known as Petite and Grande Champagne. However, each sub region of Cognac has its own recognisable style. Cognac is primarily made from the Ugni Blanc, Folle Blanche and Colombarid grapes; it is double distilled in pot stills; and is aged in French 'Limousin' oak.

ARMAGNAC

Armagnac hails from the Gascony region in south west France.

The regions are : Bas Armagnac, Tenareze and Haut Armagnac, of which the first is considered the best. Main differences between Armagnac and Cognac are : Cognac is largely made from the ugni blanc grape whereas the base wine of Armagnac is made from several local varieties; it is aged in a local oak ; the continuous still is used as opposed to the pot still.

GRAPPA/MARC

30ML

Grappa is the national brandy of Italy. It is distilled from the skins, pips, and stalks of grapes. Sometimes known as Pomace Brandy, young grappa is very fiery, but it mellows when matured in wood.

CALVADOS

30ML

Calvados is a French brandy made from distilling apple cider. The Appellation Contrôlée is situated in Normandy, Northwest France, within which the Pays d'Auge is the principal region of production, along with the Domfront, whose Calvados distillate is also based on a minimum of 30% pear cider.

PISCO

Pisco is South American brandy but is probably more akin in flavour and body to a grappa or marc. Debate still rages as to whether its origins lie in Chile or Peru, its two main centres of production. Its etymology lies in the Quechuan Indian language of Peru and Bolivia, and from the traditional terracotta pots used for aging the spirit, also called Piscos.

Aperitif wines also belong in the aromatized category. They are produced in a similar fashion to vermouth, but most of them contain greater amounts of sugar and quinine and have distinctive flavours, each being a product unto itself.

DIGESTIF

A digestif is an alcoholic beverage designed to be drunk after a meal. The term digestif can be wide sweeping and generic, often overlapping the sections outlined in this menu, with common digestifs being Cognac, Grappa, Eau de Vie and even aged quality Rums and Tequila. Some liquors, however, are taken specifically for their calumative qualities, and their abilities to aid digestion after a meal. Often these contain higher levels of alcohol, and are quite herbaceous and often bitter/bitter-sweet, commonly referred to in Italy as Amari, and others have high levels of sugar, with a smooth, velvet-like mouth-feel.
