中国葡萄酒复兴 China's Wine Renaissance

China's wine story is remarkably young, but its ambition runs deep, three decades of rapid learning have already produced regions capable of real elegance and precision.
In Ningxia, the Helan Mountains shield vines from Gobi winds while dramatic diurnal shifts concentrate flavor, producing whites of mineral tension and reds of firm structure.
In Yunnan's misted highlands around Shangri-La, cool nights and monsoon humidity favor botrytis on late-harvest grapes, yielding rare, luminous dessert wines.
Below, a curated selection of China's leading estates.
